The College of Liberal Arts offers students an opportunity to explore the intellectual achievements of humankind through a disciplined and responsible study of issues that have been of enduring importance to people. Thus, courses in liberal arts help students develop a sensitivity to the questions and values that confront them in their daily lives. At the same time, skills are built which can be put to use in solving complex problems. One of the program’s principal objectives is to achieve the hallmark of an educated person: a fundamental knowledge of the forces that have shaped and continue to direct our cultural identity.

The purpose of the undergraduate program in the College of Liberal Arts is to foster independent, critical thinking by offering students a broad education. To achieve this, the college supports the aims of the University Core Curriculum, which requires all students to engage in specific studies intended to promote an awareness of their heritage, their culture, and their environment. Students who choose to major in one of the Liberal Arts disciplines will complete a curriculum designed to promote this breadth of understanding while providing a focus through concentration in one specific area of study.

The first two years of undergraduate study in the College of Liberal Arts introduce students to the full range of arts, humanities, science, mathematics and social science areas that are established in the University Core Curriculum. During the last two years, students concentrate on their major and minor fields of study and complete their program with appropriate elective hours. Throughout the program, skills in critical thinking, problem-solving, collaboration, and communication are developed, strengthened and polished.

Many graduates with bachelor’s degrees in liberal arts continue their study at the graduate level in an academic discipline or in a profession such as medicine or law. The majority go directly into the job market. Studies have shown that liberal arts graduates are very successful in a variety of activities in commerce, business, or public service because the knowledge and skills sets in critical thinking, communication, writing, problem-solving, and analytical thinking they have developed are valuable in today’s world. Many businesses actively recruit liberal arts majors. Whether as a foundation for further study or as a broad education preparatory to positions in business, industry, and the public domain, a liberal arts degree has intrinsic worth and enduring value in providing knowledge for life.

Total Semester Credit Hours 74

1 Students must demonstrate the ability to express themselves in acceptable written English. The College requirement is satisfied if a student earns a grade of C or better in ENGL 203. Students who do not meet this standard must repeat the course prior to completing 60 hours and earn a grade of C or better or must immediately arrange with the director of the writing laboratory to be certified as competent in writing.

2 ENGL 203 will count toward the Communication requirement or the Literature in English requirement, but will not count toward both requirements.

3 Students must take a foreign language placement test if they:
   • intend to enroll for the first time in a college Spanish, French, German, Russian, Arabic, Chinese, Japanese, Classical Greek, Italian, or Latin course
   • have knowledge of the language acquired in any way

The placement test serves as a basis for credit by examination. Placement tests are offered throughout the calendar year by the Department of Hispanic Studies for Spanish and by the Department of International Studies for all other languages. Students who have taken the Advanced Placement (AP) test or the Reading Achievement test in their foreign language of choice may substitute the test results for the placement exam.

4 No course used to fulfill this requirement may fulfill any other college or University requirement except in the minor field of study.

5 Minimum of 3 and maximum of 6 semester credit hours in Creative Arts.

6 Courses in military, air or naval science may not be substituted for required courses.

7 The list of approved courses is available in the degree audit for each major.

6 Courses in military, air or naval science may not be substituted for required courses.

7 The list of approved courses is available in the degree audit for each major.
a major and a minor field, students in the College of Liberal Arts may elect to have two Liberal Arts major fields of study. Both majors may be within the college, or one major may be outside the college, provided both majors lead to the same baccalaureate degree. It is critical for any student wishing to pursue a double degree or double major to see her adviser early because there is a time limit on declaration (see below).

Students who are enrolled in a University Studies degree are not eligible for a double major or a double degree.

Students must declare the double degree no later than the semester in which they will complete 90 hours. Students must have and maintain at least a 3.0 GPA cumulative and in the majors (or the minimum departmental GPA requirement in the major, whichever is higher), with at least a 3.0 GPA in at least 9 hours in the second field of study at the time of declaration. Before declaring the double degree, students should consult with the appropriate advisors to formulate the combined degree plan. The following requirements must be met: the student must

1. satisfy all University and college requirements
2. complete all required courses in each major, if both majors are in the College of Liberal Arts (i.e., take all courses that are specifically listed in each regular degree program)
3. in cases where one major is in the College of Liberal Arts and the other major is in another college, the student shall take in his or her liberal arts major field of study the same number of credit hours required of regular majors in that field and also satisfy whatever conditions are set by the other college for its major field

Candidates for a double bachelor’s degree must have been in residence at least two academic years and must complete all essential work of the second curriculum not covered in the first. To qualify for the double degree, the student must complete a minimum of 30 semester credit hours more than the higher number of semester credit hours required for either degree.

Curricular Options

International and Intercultural Experiences

The International and Cultural Diversity requirement encourages all students to learn about attitudes and cultures different from their own. All students are required to select from a list of approved courses that foster greater awareness of our interdependent and diverse world.

Students also may select, as free electives, courses which address cultural diversity issues in the United States. Courses in this area encourage students to focus on issues of race, ethnicity and gender and to develop a broader understanding of the diverse cultures and traditions in the United States.

Further opportunity to increase international and national intercultural awareness can be accomplished through study abroad and internship programs. More information on these programs is available from the college’s study abroad programs manager, who is housed in the Undergraduate Programs Office of the College of Liberal Arts.

Liberal Arts Honors Program

The College of Liberal Arts encourages qualified majors to participate in its Honors Program, which is designed for academically talented high school graduates who have distinguished secondary school records (top 10%) and high scores on achievement tests (Minimum SAT score [verbal + math] of 1360 or ACT score [composite] of 28). Students may also become Honors eligible once they establish a Texas A&M GPA of at least 3.5.

Students accepted into the program take courses that foster an interdisciplinary outlook characteristic of the Liberal Arts and that synthesize knowledge from other courses. Participants work in small classes with some of the most distinguished faculty at Texas A&M University. Students develop their own interests and have the option to write an honors thesis under the direct supervision of a professor with whom they have chosen to work. For information about Texas A&M Honors Program and Fellows Program (i.e., the senior thesis), see the Honors and Undergraduate Research (http://honors.tamu.edu) website. Individual departments may have their own Honors program for their majors.

Interdisciplinary Minors

Interdisciplinary minors are offered in Africana Studies, Asian Studies, Comparative Cultural Studies, Film Studies, Hispanic Studies for Community Engagement, Journalism Studies, Latino/a Mexican American Studies, Religious Studies, and Women’s and Gender Studies. Specific course requirements and options are available from each interdisciplinary program director.

Cooperative Education Program

Cooperative education enables students to gain practical work experience and a salary while completing academic requirements. During the four-year academic program, co-op students complete two to four periods of work away from campus, gaining experience through on-the-job training and thus improving their opportunities for future employment. An advisor in the cooperative education office provides additional information about this program.

Government Service (MPA Programs)

Most graduate programs in public administration recommend a broad background of knowledge and skills in the following areas: the political, social, economic and legal context of administration; analytical tools; individual, group and organizational dynamics; policy analysis; administrative/management processes; and arts and science foundation skills. Students are best prepared for an MPA program if their undergraduate programs are multidisciplinary in nature, drawing upon political science, economics, the behavioral sciences, the quantitative sciences, and administrative and managerial sciences.

Law

Most law school admissions committees require a student to have a baccalaureate degree, or equivalent, as well as an acceptable score on the Law School Admissions Test (LSAT). In general, law schools prefer that a student seek a diverse college education rather than one which is narrowly specialized. They favor thorough learning in some broad cultural field of a student’s choice, such as history, economics, political science, philosophy, mathematics, science, literature, or the classics. Admissions committees rarely favor concentration in specialized, technical curricula unless such study is adequately supplemented by advanced work in the social sciences and humanities. The Law School Admissions Test Council and the Council of the Section on Legal Education and Admissions of the American Bar Association both advise against the taking of satisfactory/unsatisfactory courses by students intending to go to law school.

The college now offers a University Studies degree with a concentration in pre-law (B.A. in Society, Ethics and Law). Advising for pre-law students regardless of major, including application forms for taking the Law School
Admissions Test, may be obtained from the Office of Professional School Advising.

Medicine

Advising for all pre-health students, including medical and dental students, may be obtained from the Office of Professional School Advising. Students are urged to stop by the office to pick up information on professional schools and talk with an advisor very early in their collegiate career.

Teacher Certification

Students majoring in one of the departments of the College of Liberal Arts and working toward a teaching certificate must meet the minimum requirements described in the College of Education and Human Development section under secondary teacher certification. Because many certification requirements are determined by the State of Texas and thus are subject to periodic change, students working toward certification should maintain frequent contact with advisors in the College of Education and Human Development.

Theology

The American Association of Theological Schools recommends that students planning to enter a theological seminary include in their undergraduate curriculum the following subjects.

- English (6 semesters)
- History (3 semesters)
- Philosophy (3 semesters)
- Natural science (2 semesters)
- Social science (6 semesters)
- Foreign language (4 semesters): Latin, German or French
- Religion (3 semesters)
